Farben

One colour, one meaning, in my grammar book and all my cheatsheets.

Colour	Example	Means
blue	eine Küche · er ist dunkel	Nominativ: the subject, after sein · wer? was?
red	Hast du einen Stift?	Akkusativ: the object, after haben, es gibt · wen? was?
green	aus der Schweiz · im Süden	Dativ (DW A1 E9 L3): after aus, in (wo?) · wem? wo?
purple	das Auto meines Vaters	Genitiv (later): possession, "of" · wessen?
orange	du wohnst · Ich wohne in Berlin.	Verb: in a table its ending, in a sentence the conjugated verb; in the Perfekt both parts
grey italics	The garden is big.	English and notes
bold	Der Garten ist groß.	the word the example is about

The rules

1. One colour, one meaning, everywhere and forever. A new colour comes only with my yes, and is added to this list.
2. Gender never gets a colour: m · f · n · pl are columns.
3. What changes with the case takes the case colour: the ending of articles and possessives, later of adjectives (einen, den, meine; no ending, no colour: mein, ein, kein); a pronoun or a short form as a whole word (er, im, am).
4. Colour marks only what changes, never decoration, and only on pages and sheets about cases or verbs. In an example only the word it is about is coloured. Elsewhere words stay black.
5. A second thing in the same table, like e → i in nimmst, is bold, never a second colour.
